Menlo Park

Mrs. Camille A. Dorn, widow of D. S. Dorn, passed away in San Francisco last Monday. After the earthquake and fire in San Francisco the family resided on Valparaiso avenue on the property now owned by Mrs. Robert Moore. The deceased is survived by five grown children.

Mrs. Evelyn Susan Fatchett, 73, residing on Pine street for the past year, passed away at the Palo Alto hospital Friday evening of last week. The deceased was a native of Wisconsin and came to Palo Alto four years ago from her home in Iowa. A portion of her long life was spent in Kansas. The funeral on Tuesday was largely attended by sorrowing friends and relatives.

Charles of North Dakota, Robert of Iowa, and George of North Dakota; two daughters, Mrs. Nellie Brink of Los Angeles and Karen of Palo Alto; three brothers, Frank Crowther of Redwood City, Alonzo Crowther of Idaho, and Joseph Crowther of Oklahoma; and one sister, Mrs. Clara Guthridge of Idaho. She was the widow of the late Robert Fatchett.

The Menlo Park Sanitary election takes place on March 7. At this election two trustees are to be elected, the terms of L. H. Cook and John Glunz expire. They are seeking re-election and will not be opposed. Both are excellent gentlemen and should be kept on the sanitary board.

The annual communion of the Knights of Columbus of Palo Alto and Menlo Park will take place at the 8 o'clock mass in the Church of the Nativity Sunday morning. After the mass, breakfast will be served to the members and others at the Cardinal Hotel, Palo Alto. Several speakers are engaged to speak at the breakfast. It is thought over 200 members will participate in the service.

The Seventeenth of March celebration in Menlo Park is to be bigger and better than ever. George E. Walsh, who has the affair in charge, promises a unique program this year. The O'Neill sisters, famous dancers, are to be presented, giving a performance of Irish reels and jigs. The Elks of San Mateo are down for a big feature. San Francisco talent is also to add to the evening's entertainment.

Grand Trustee Miller, N.S.G.W., paid an official visit to Menlo Park last Thursday evening. He was greeted by a large attendance. Miller expressed his satisfaction at the growth and financial condition of the organization. A chicken supper was served after the meeting.

The members of the American Legion Post, No. 443, of Menlo Park, were highly successful in the theatre party and country store stunt in the New Menlo Theatre Tuesday evening. After the show merchandise was distributed by Si Cady, imitable salesman, who disposed of the goods with a humor that was well applauded. His sallies and jokes kept the big audience in constant laughter. He was assisted by Commander Blanchard. During the jollity Mrs. Violet M. Walrath came to the platform and in a neat address announced her candidacy for the office of city clerk at the forthcoming election in April. She was heartily applauded. The party was the first function under the auspices of the baby post. A large crowd greeted the first event, for which every member of the Legion is thankful.

Wild pigeons have become a nuisance on ranches bordering the bay. On the Kavanaugh holding, Ravenswood, the birds became so numerous and destructive that permission had to be secured from the government to kill them. When the seed was being sowed the pigeons would follow the furrows devouring the grain in quantities. They had to be shot at continually to keep them away. The owner of the land could not use the pigeons for food as it was against federal regulations. Government agents stalked about, watching the whole proceedings. Why the government protects this bird is a puzzle for it neither dances nor sings and is very destructive. It is a pest to the farmer. Our representatives in congress should change this law.

Trinity Women's Guild of Menlo Park met Tuesday afternoon at the parish house for Lenten sewing. The tea hour is being dispensed with until after Easter. Lenten services are to be held each Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at Trinity Church, it was announced today by the rector, the Rev. Ralph Smith.

Dr. Albert E. Blake, first mayor of Menlo Park and a member of the council since the city's incorporation in 1927, announced yesterday that he would not stand for re-election in April.

Three times elected to the council by large majorities, Dr. Blake successfully withstood a recall attempt in 1929. He has been active in the community since its incorporation, seeking to increase property values and otherwise advance the progress of the city.

Dr. Blake was born in Menlo Park, the son of Charles Edward Blake, a pioneer in the state. His mother was a niece of Gen. George C. Johnson, prominent figure in early California history. The elder Mr. Blake came west across the Isthmus of Panama in 1849 and while on the way assisted in organizing the Masonic Board of Relief. He was a charter member of California Lodge No. 1 Free and Accepted Masons, to which his son belongs.

Although he is now a dentist, with offices in San Francisco, Dr. Blake practiced medicine in Menlo Park 43 years ago. The Blake home is a part of land owned by the family for more than half a century. The site of the Menlo Park Presbyterian Church, was given by Robert Johnson, a cousin of Dr. Blake, and St. Patrick's Seminary was endowed by Johnson's wife, Mrs. Kate Johnson, a portrait of whom now hangs in the vestibule of the seminary.

Whit Whitmore, residing on the Alameda, yesterday, through W. E. Monroe, purchased the W. Green-halt holding on the highway, now occupied by Madame Van Dohn, the fortune teller. The new buyer intends to improve the property.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, nee Carter, are here from Honolulu visiting the latter's parents in Stanford Park. Mr. Meyer is engaged in the drygoods business in the islands. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer say that the sensational accounts of the attack by four natives on a naval officer's wife was greatly exaggerated. Conditions in the islands are not nearly so bad as the sensational newspapers would have us believe.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hinman in Stanford Park on February 14. Mr. Hinman is the dyer and cleaner on the highway.

Mrs. W. R. Leach, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis at Palo Alto, is convalescent and will soon be able to return to her home at Atherton.

O. R. Hornbuckle, who has conducted the Menlo Pastry Shop, near the post office for the past five years, will close his business on the first of the month and move to Redwood City where he has leased a building in the business district. The place is to be known as the Redwood Pastry Shop. Mr. and Mrs. Hornbuckle carry with them to their new location the very best wishes of the people of Menlo Park.

The unemployment committee has wood cut by the unemployed, for sale. Those wishing to make purchases will call upon Judge Hoss at the city hall. The wood is to be sold at a bargain.

The many friends of Senator Shortridge will be pleased to learn that he has so far recovered from his recent illness that he expects to be on the floor of the senate early next week. His son, Sam, who went to Washington on learning of his father's sickness, has left the capital and will be here next Wednesday.

A Valentine party was given Sunday at the home of Judge and Mrs. Jean B. Hoss, 1372 Johnson street, Menlo Park, in celebration of Mrs. Hoss' birthday. The house was decorated with acacias and hearts were used as table decorations. Those present for luncheon were Mayor and Mrs. W. J. Weeden, Gene Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Al Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Mehl, Bobbie and Marie Mehl, Mrs. J. H. Bushy of Salem, Oregon, Judge and Mrs. Hoss, and their four children, Harold, Melvin, Ellen, and Clara. Mr. Wilkins acted as toastmaster.

LEAKY GAS FIXTURES
Four San Mateo people were rescued in the nick of time from being asphyxiated by gas from a leaky furnace.

Let this remind you to make sure that your own fixtures are all right, and to resolve to see to it that you are never in a room entirely closed with gas appliances going full blast. Always keep some outside air moving into the room.—San Francisco Examiner.

War and Disarmament

During the conflagration of 1914-17 the barbarisms of warfare left an indelible mark on the whole organization of society. Mankind almost universally acknowledged the folly of this episode and favored the elimination of such atrocities from the annals of future history. President Wilson voiced the sentiment of the world in his demand for a League of Nations and an International Court of Justice, so that any and all international difficulties and differences should in the future be settled honorably and peacefully—by reason—not by bloodshed. Treaties and pacts were signed outlawing War entirely, but no power was constituted to enforce the Court's decrees. Lacking such power every nation was forced, through distrust of every other nation to maintain an adequate police force to protect itself in cases of unexpected invasion.

Finally the public became aware of the futility of existing circumstances and demanded a disarmament conference. One of a series of these conferences is in session now. So far attention seems to be focusing on the possibility of a general declaration as to outlawing war's newest methods of destruction—poison gas, incendiary bombs, etc. No one denies that such efforts are quite humanitarian and praiseworthy, though the obvious point is that if nations can and will regulate methods of warfare, and will abide by these regulations, they can abide by their agreements already made to outlaw War entirely. Until the implements of war are taken from the individual powers and vested in an International force, war will be a constant threat. May the nations of the world see fit to abolish arms in their entirety and not to dally with the shell of this incendiary instrument whose contents are sufficient to burn humanity off the face of the earth. (The chemical, thermite, has the power of raising a heat of 3000 degrees Centigrade.) Why, if we are to acknowledge such a thing as an advanced civilization, try to humanize war when all methods of warfare are essentially non-human? Why do the job half way? Let's make the comparatively easy sacrifice of scrapping all armaments and then enjoy the comfort and satisfaction of knowing that the means of another SUPREME sacrifice has been removed in the interest of civilization, present and future.

No Midground Is Offered In New Prohibition Poll

The Literary Digest is conducting another of its celebrated polls, and again on the prohibition question. This time however the issue is cleancut. The ballot submits only two questions:

"Do you favor continuance of the prohibition amendment?"

"Do you favor repeal of the prohibition amendment?"

There is no mid-ground or modification, or no distracting question of enforcement, such as confused the result of the Digest's last poll which gave both wets and dries opportunity to claim victory through personal interpretation of the modificationist vote.

After all, the sentiment on prohibition is capable of division into but two ways—for and against. The modificationists—even the most half hearted ones—are opponents of the amendment as it stands, since modification to even a slight extent would be a step in the direction toward which the repealists would have the country go.

WHAT WILL BE THE EFFECT?

Every acre of kelp growing in the Pacific from Gaviota to the Mexican line has been included in an exclusive harvesting permit issued by the state fish and game commission to the Kelco Company of Delaware, a syndicate headed by Victor LeGloahec, French chemist, who recently came to this country to develop a secret method of treating kelp that will permit the recovery of valuable products at considerably less cost than present methods. The by-products, it is said, will be used extensively in the manufacture of paper, cement and the preparation of leather.

All the facts back of this franchise have not been made public, but the News does know that there is considerable concern among sportsmen as to what effect this wholesale harvesting will have on fish and other marine life. There are but 234 square miles of kelp growing in front of Santa Barbara, and 2742 miles along the coast from Ventura, to Gaviota. Nevertheless, the belief widely exists that these kelp beds have much to do with the quantity of fish abounding in these waters. Furthermore, the belief is expressed that if the kelp offers such wide commercial opportunities there should be, if they do not already exist, certain provisions in this franchise which will safeguard the California coast from losing an asset that may be worth untold millions of dollars, particularly in the event of war when kelp can be turned to a most important use.—Santa Barbara News.

"ACCIDENT COMPLEX"

Have you an "accident complex?" Police officials, psychologists and others who have made a study of the histories and capabilities of persons involved in automobile accidents, have made some amazing discoveries. Picking one hundred names at random from a list of those who had caused mishaps on the Detroit streets the investigators found many had figured in a large number of previous accidents and a proportion were physically or mentally handicapped. Berkeley is going to look into the records of those who had accidents and there is a plan to do the same in Oakland. It may be possible to find out if some men and women have the "reckless attitude" which leads them into trouble.—Oakland Tribune.

Colonial Balls Feature Washington Bicentennial

Many celebrations in honor of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington are taking the form of pageants, plays, and costume balls.

Seemingly unable to wait for the actual birth-date, organizations from one end of the country to the other began celebrating early in January, with hundreds of events scheduled for the time before and after February 22.

According to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, many cities have already begun the festivities with colonial balls, and others are making their plans. Important in these is the Beaux Arts ball in New York on January 22, which society leaders of all important cities attended.

The Bicentennial Ball at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., sponsored by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, to be held on the night of February 22, will also be attended by prominent society leaders from every state in the Union. The All States' Society will hold a ball that night in the Shoreham Hotel, and the New England States Society in the Willard Hotel, with dozens of other costume balls in other places in the national capital.

One of the most attractive events scheduled for February 22 is the ball to be given in historic Gadsby's tavern in Alexandria, Va., reproducing the last birthday ball which General Washington attended in this very tavern. The guests attending the ball in 1789 will be represented on this occasion by their descendants, many in the actual costumes worn at that time.

Larchmont, N. Y., has elaborate plans under way for a grand colonial ball to be held at the Larchmont Shore Club, February 22, in which all the young set will participate to make it one of the most successful social events of the year.

Committees drafted from the civic and patriotic organizations of the city and surrounding towns are arranging for a ball to be given on February 22, when the authentic costumes of the period in the possession of scores of residents of the town, will be brought out for the occasion.

Pageant in Brooklyn

In Brooklyn, N. Y., the Battle Pass Chapter of the D. A. R. gave a fashion show of the colonial period on January 15, when the participants represented such lights of the Revolutionary era as Martha Washington, Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, Mrs. John Adams and others.

"A costume ball of the spirit of '76" will open festivities in Albany, N. Y., on February 22. The ball will mark the conclusion of a day of celebrations by the state commission, and will be the most elaborate affair ever attempted in Albany. All guests will be costumed either in military or civilian dress of the Revolutionary period. Petite Dutch girls, direct descendants of the early settlers of Albany will serve the buffet luncheon at midnight. Various pageant episodes will mark the opening of the ball culminating in a final number of a grand march in which all guests will take part. This will evolve itself into general dancing depicting the first inaugural ball. During the period of intermission at midnight, a musical pageant with a chorus of 200 voices will stage an allegorical historical pageant in the nature of a surprise offering.

The Tenth Regiment Armory in Albany, N. Y., will be the scene of a costume ball on February 22, when the musicians and attendants will appear in the Colonial livery.

St. James, N. Y., will enjoy a ball on February 20 in the Old Fire Hall which will be a costume affair with tableaux, songs, and stories depicting scenes from the life of Washington, with incidental music and dances of that period. The proceeds are to be devoted to the needy of St. James and Neenaset.

The city committee in Syracuse, N. Y., is planning a colonial ball to be given some time after Easter. Newport, R. I., will also give a bicentennial ball after Easter. The Newport Lodge No. 104, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will be hosts.

Tableaux Offered
Ramsey, N. J., will give a pageant centered around the battle of Brandywine. This will be given by the Village Improvement Association. At the symphonic pageant given January 10 at Symphony hall in Boston, the second part of the program was devoted to early American tableaux, taken from famous paintings.

A Yankee Doodle ball at the Hotel St. Regis, New York City, on January 22 was in keeping with the bicentennial spirit, the proceeds devoted to Stony Wold Sanitarium.

The Twelfth Night ball given on January 6 at Berryville, Va., brought out an array of descendants of the pioneers of Clark county in the authentic historic costumes which are heirlooms in Clark county homes.

Washington and Lee University's annual fancy dress ball at Lexington, Va., took the form of a "Garden Party at Mt. Vernon." French and British officers' uniforms mingled with the colonial uniform and the quaint gowns of the ladies. The date was January 29.

Montgomery, Ala., will see the socially elite of the state assembled at Montgomery on February 22. Birmingham, Mobile, Selma and other towns will receive their invitations delivered by a squadron of nine planes sent out to them by the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce.

Deland, Fla., will have a Washington tea at which Col. Arthur Erwin Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will entertain at the Hotel Putnam, on February 22.

Columbus, Ohio, will celebrate February 22 with four celebrations. Church bells, chimes, and whistles will sound throughout the city at 10 a. m. the hour that Washington was born. At 11 a. m. a national salute will be fired and a plaque marking the first day will be unveiled in the A. L. U. building by the D. A. R. At noon the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution will hold a patriotic luncheon at the Deschler-Wallace Hotel. The climax of the day will be the re-enactment of the George Washington inaugural ball at Memorial hall at 9 p. m. Authentic episodes in the life of Washington will be presented in tableaux during the evening.

In Santa Fe, N. M., the bicentennial celebration will be opened with a loan exhibition of colonial portraits, silver, furniture and samplers at the new museum.

The Kansas City Bicentennial Committee has been busy for months perfecting plans for an elaborate costume ball to be given on February 22. The famous Convention hall of that city will be the scene of this ball which will follow a bicentennial dinner to be attended by the leaders of the city and state.

UP AND DOWN THE STATE

WHOSE OX?

Senator Johnson of California is a little right in his demand that the United States Government shall have a "policy" with regard to foreign loans.

In fact, the United States would be much nearer now to having such a policy if the members of the senate, like Johnson, could team with the White House in the matter of deciding on such a policy. That venom of the California senator's, which has prevented his seeing any good whatever in anything that President Hoover might do, is but one of such interferences with a "national" policy.

The idea that the loan by some New York broker of several million dollars of American savings to France or Germany or Bolivia is a "private matter" is childish; it is worse than a crime, it is a blunder.

The idea that either the margin of American riches or of American poverty can be drained into Europe or South America and the American Government be indifferent is intolerable.

Certainly the American Government should be able to observe effectively whether American resources are being used against American interests.

We can be sure that if Hiram Johnson were president he would do his best to use the power of the administration for American commercial and political benefit.

Why should Johnson be envious of the administration's doing this with Herbert Hoover as president?—Fresno Republican.

YES, NO TITLES

News comes from Kentucky that the legislature is planning to impose an annual tax of $100 on those who bear the honorific title of "Colonel."

This opens up a considerable source of income to worried officials of this country. If all those bearing the title of "Colonel," and "Judge," and "Doctor" were taxed $100 a year, the government would have very little trouble about its deficit.

There are very few official titles in this country, since this is a democracy. But also, and for the same reason, there are a great many unofficial titles. The very name of your section of the country can be made into quite a handsome little title, for one thing. If you hail from Louisiana or Tennessee, you can draw yourself up proudly when you are in Iowa and say that you are a Southerner. If you hail from San Francisco, when you go to Pasadena, N. J., you tell the world you are a Westerner, and the word has more elan than the title of many a more nobleman. And of course even St. Peter listens respectfully if you announce in silky tones that you are a Virginian.

Yes, this is a democracy; which means that nobody has titles—just everybody has them!—San Francisco Examiner.

LOYALTY OF BANKS

Often the banker who does the patriotic thing is damned for his patriotism. Such will probably be the case in San Francisco. A few days ago three bankers in that city bought $500,000 worth of Hetch Hetchy bonds from the municipality, and paid $30,000 more than the San Francisco market price. To make the story brief, the bankers took a half million dollars worth of the bonds at par in order to keep work going on the city's water project and at the same time to keep 1350 men employed.

The situation there is little different from that facing other communities. Bonds are difficult to sell because money is being hoarded. San Francisco, long since, asked for bids on $4,000,000 of the bonds. There have been few bidders, and last week there were none. It meant that the bankers must buy or see all work stopped on this most important of projects behind the Yosemite in the high Sierras. The bankers bought—and they bought at par.

In time they will make dividends on those bonds, and the public will forget that it was not profit but patriotism that inspired the investment.

Seldom do the people learn the facts in such incidents as these. The banks every week do one or many things to fortify the security of their community or state. The profits they derive from this confidence could be earned by private investments—if only those millions of dollars now being hoarded would come out of seclusion!—Santa Barbara News.

LET CITIZENS DO THIS THINKING

The experts of the United States Department of Agriculture are giving up their habit of prophecy. No more will they predict what farm prices will be.

They ought never to have indulged in this prediction.

It is, of course, easy now to note the errors and the failures of these predictions in the past. But just the same, this whole business has been a poor example of the failure of the trial and error method.

Statistics are a part of the government's business. Conclusions drawn from these statistics are not a part of the government's business.

As a public service, the government can well find out and report on the acreage of wheat or cotton plantings, and the facts about temperature, rain fall, humidity, and other factors in growth.

Thus far, and no farther. Let the citizen, or voluntary organizations of city citizens, through their leaders, come to what conclusions they please from the facts presented. The government will have enough to do to make sure that its observations are correct.—

LON CHANEY'S SON

The film debut of Creighton Chaney has been held up because of his refusal to trade upon the name of a famous father and accept a billing as "Lon Chaney Jr." The boy seems to be a chip off the old block. The "man of a thousand faces" never changed face and the son has battled stoutly in defense of his stand. Now it appears that everything is coming out all right. Virtue still has the habit of self-reward and the publicity attending his persistent refusal probably equals in volume and certainly surpasses in value that which he would have received by consenting to adopt his father's name.—Los Angeles Times.

SHOCKED STAFF CITY

BOSTON — Peter Pronan went to a friend's apartment room for a party. While there he took off his clothes to take a nap. His friend failed to show up after a time and Peter thought he had better go look him up. He ventured outside the door of the room and the wind blew the door shut, locking it. Clad only in his underwear, Peter started looking for his friend. He paraded the streets, followed by a curious throng, until a cop found him.

Enough tobacco to make 1,614,000,000 cigarettes was shipped from Greenville, Tenn., this season.

GAINS IN WEALTH, INCOME SHOW NATION'S PROGRESS

Increases Are Impressive, Despite Frequency of Depressions

By ALLARD SMITH
Executive Vice President, The Union Trust Company, Cleveland
Statistics of national wealth and national income offer conclusive proof that despite its occasional setbacks the United States is steadily progressing in the general scale of prosperity.

National wealth for 1930, according to a statement prepared by the National Industrial Conference Board, was $329,000,000,000, while national income was $71,000,000,000. This would be at the rate of $10,961 capital and $2366 income for each family in the United States.

Compared with 1929 wealth showed a loss of 8.9 per cent, while the decrease in income was 16.4 per cent. This represents shrinkage of values and prices and decrease of earning power from 1929 to 1930. The last preceding estimate of national wealth was $320,800,000 in 1922.

When we go back to the figures of 1914, however, we see what the general progress of the country has been over even a comparative short term of years. In 1914 the wealth of the nation was estimated at $188,600,000,000, this figure being based on the distribution of wealth by states and excluding nationally owned wealth.

On the same basis the wealth in 1930 showed an increase of 71 per cent. Expressed in the value of 1913 dollars the wealth in 1914 was $189,100,000,000 and that of 1930 $261,000,000,000, an increase of 38 per cent, which certainly represents the minimum physical growth of our national assets.

When we add to this evidence of increasing wealth the fact that the increase in the national income for the same 16 years, from 1914 to 1930, expressed in the value of the 1930 dollar, was 114 per cent, we get a fair understanding of the pace at which, notwithstanding recessions, the nation has been steadily forging ahead.

THE POOR HUBBIES!

SEATTLE, Wash.—Six hundred husbands went to work with a grouse on as the result of missing their breakfasts. A motorist had run into and knocked down a fire hydrant, creating a miniature artesian well in the middle of the street. An emergency crew from the water department was rushed out to shut off the water. But they also shut off the gas main with the water main, and there was no gas in the stoves of 800 homes.

If there were but one

If there were but one telephone in town, people would come from near and far to see it, to touch it, to marvel at it.

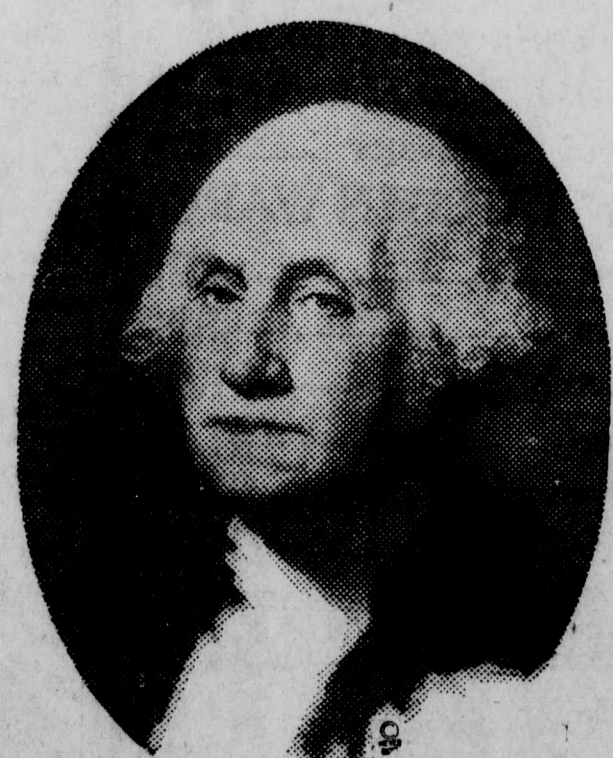

But it would do no errands, save no steps, bring no voices of friends, transact no business.

Connected with ten others, it would assume a real value. With a hundred, extraordinary value.

Yet your telephone is connected over the country, with 20 million.

Its cost—a few cents a day.

One of Washington's characteristics was thrift. All of his biographers emphasize this quality. Thrift is an outstanding virtue of practically all of our great men—Lincoln, Franklin, Roosevelt, Edison and many others.

Only a few can become great, but all of us, by being thrifty, can achieve greater usefulness and success.

I looked and looked, filling my soul with her beauty; I gripped the carved bench in front of me and held myself rigid, concentrating every faculty into the intensity of my regard. Polito offered something to the colonel—a ring, I supposed. The calm father spoke to the Senorita and she extended one slender hand. It raised slowly, as though it were lifting the weight of the world, and her eyes came up with it.

I searched her face eagerly now, drinking in her loveliness. I would live this love of mine during the minute or two that she might still remain the Senorita Lamartina, and then—free of Caracas—I would seek forgetfulness in arms under the banner of Bolivar, for I could never go back again to the peace and quiet of the great plantations.

"Dios," said Manuel in an anxious whisper, "she has seen thee!"

Now I realized that the Senorita Dulce had found my eyes. She was looking past the colonel's shoulder; her lips were parted, her eyes wide, color came and went in her face, and a deep sigh escaped her.

With outstretched hand pointing in my direction she pushed past the prospective bridegroom and started down the carpeted aisle toward me. She seemed like one who moves in a trance, her eyes unseeing, her arms extended as though in supplication.

Before she had taken two steps I was on my feet and, in three strides, stood before her, catching the swaying figure as it fell.

With a childlike sigh she snuggled into the protection of my arms. "Senor Moon-wraith," she whispered in a tiny voice that was drowned in the swelling lamentations that filled the cathedral. She raised a hand, wonderingly, and touched my darkened hair. "Is it the Senor?" I would—

"None other," what have I done, Senorita?"

"Hasten," said a rasping voice at my elbow; "you must escape."

"Save thyself, Manuel, good friend," I said; "nothing they may do to me."

Now the crowd was upon us in an overwhelming flood. Polito—his face as black as a thundercloud—tore the precious burden from my arms, soldiers barked orders, women screamed and children cried shrilly. Thrusting bodies propelled me swiftly toward the wide doorway, out of which we tumbled in a scrambling heap.

CHAPTER V

Adios.

Even as I entered the spacious home of Tomas Carrasco a file of soldiers deployed and surrounded it. Verily, Morales moved swiftly—and I knew I would never win free of Caracas. Yet, I had held her in my arms again, had lost myself in the sweet depths of her eyes, had heard her call my name, had felt the touch of her fingers. To my starved soul that was very much indeed, so I laughed gaily as the good Tomas, all of a tremble, hurried into my comfortable quarters.

"Do they seek thee, Senor—these soldiers?"

Aye, Tomas; I am very valuable to them, for I have just disappeared a wedding and I have put a lasting hurt into the heart of Colonel Fuentes."

"Ah, misfortune, Senor; it will bring death to all of us!"

"Not so, Tomas; this will bring death only to a poor French sailor who would feast his soul upon the beauty of a lady. This inn of yours is open to any traveler who has money to pay for accommodations. You know nothing of me; I shall assure them."

As a sergeant and five soldiers and Lieutenant Polito—marched in from the patio I chose the side of the room farthest from the window, that I might stand as much as possible in the gloom. The sergeant turned to Polito, who shook his head and touched his bandaged throat with caressing fingers, then the sub-officer addressed me: "Are you the devil, Senor, who has put a spell upon the Senorita Lamartina?"

"There is too much flattery in your words, sergeant," I said. "You assign too much power to me, and I think it is the Senorita who has cast a spell upon all of us."

Polito started and stared.

"What are you called, Senor?"

"Timoleon Sourdez," said I, choosing at random the first name that came into my mind, "a sailor raised in the Indies, who will work for anybody, on any ship, at any time. I am a floater—that's all."

"How came you, Senor, in the cathedral?"

"I sat alone, this morning, in the Plaza San Jacinto, while people passed into the great church in sympathy for my loneliness, led me in so that I might view the wedding of the beautiful lady of Spain and the wise Colonel Fuentes. If evil has been wrought in the cathedral, Sergeant, it is no work of mine."

"Yet you—"

"The Frenchman, Senor, is ever a lover; and if I stared at her is it anything a thousand others were not doing?"

"Yet she—"

"Ah, must I let her fall, waiting to the carpeted aisle; would that have been the act of a Frenchman? We are a chivalrous race, Senor, and we offer our arms—and our hearts—at all times. May one do less?"

Polito swung his legs, a half-smile on his handsome face. The sergeant shrugged his shoulders helplessly and turned toward his superior. "The lieutenant desires to question him—"

"Not at all," said Polito. His voice was a hoarse, rasping whisper, yet so puny an effort sent him off into a paroxysm of coughing.

"The Senor Lieutenant has an atrocious cold," I ventured.

Whereupon he smiled at me in the friendliest manner. "I was in a storm," he explained.

"I am sorry, and your head—"

"Is doing nicely, thank you; it came in contact with a spar." He studied my face for half a minute. "Things might be worse, Senor."

"A philosophic view indeed," said I, "and one in which I cannot share, for soldiers at this moment surround my place of abode."

He laughed, a sorry effort, but sufficient. "A temporary arrangement, I think. Perhaps they imagine that the tall sailor, who has really offered only the Frenchman's worship to beauty, might escape like a moon-wraith."

A wild surge of joy went over me. Polito knew me, he was my friend, he was telling me that I would be free! I could have thrown my arms around him. "And the guards, Senor Lieutenant—"

"Have been placed there by order of Colonel Fuentes, and will be removed, therefore, only by his order. I shall see him, however, within the hour."

"I pray, Senor Lieutenant," I said fervently, "that I shall cause no further disturbance—if, indeed, I have been the cause of any. When my guards have been removed I shall take the way to La Guaira, where some ship—"

Now, watching his face, I saw that Polito did not brighten at this prospect, and I was glad, for so long as the Senorita Dulce remained in Venezuela, there would I remain.

"Adios, then," said he.

I heard, in less than an hour, the crisp bark of orders and the sounds of shot feet on the stones of the patio; sounds that, fading swiftly, told me that the guards had gone, and that I was free again. Yet I was free to leave Caracas, even if I were permitted. If I were free why should I go, why should I leave the Senorita, who was still the Senorita, and not yet the Senorita de Fuentes? I could not hope to disarrange another wedding, and if Dulce were willing to marry Adolfo to-day why should she be unwilling tomorrow? Yet she did not love him; of that I felt very sure. Why, then, should she marry him at all?

While I pondered thus, accomplishing nothing, a subtle fragrance filled the room. I dared not believe my senses. The Senorita? It could not be. Dulce would not come to see me here. I was dreaming; my insane worship had touched my brain, and I would see her, doubtless, all the rest of my life. I had heard of such a thing, or read of it, and had

A slim figure stood in the doorway, a figure all in lacy black, with a heavy veil that effectually concealed the features. One might not have known whether she were dark or light, but I knew.

"Again, Senorita," I said, bowing over a slim hand, "you find me in a prison. The visit of an angel could not have been—"

She touched my hair with trembling fingers. "It was light, was it not, Senor? I have dreamed of your hair as being light; was all that just a dream—and am I dreaming now?"

"I hardly know what has been real, and what—"

"Did I not see you first in the moonlight, Senor, hither, and with a strange light in your eyes? Did you not come to my aid when I called, and did not you find me in the storm? Did not your eyes draw me away from the altar? Are you now only the spirit of the man who was lost in a raging sea?"

I tried to laugh. "I am only a set of shadow, Your Majesty, which will follow you everywhere. Wherever you go, there will I go, for you are the star of my hope; your voice—"

"You are mad, Senor. You—you came to the cathedral, then, to—"

"I went to the cathedral to stop the wedding."

"Mother Mary!" she gasped. "And I went to the altar with Adolfo to save you. You should have left the city ere this. They offered to sell me your life, your freedom. Why did you not go when you had the opportunity?"

"My life and my freedom belonged to me. You speak in parables, Your Majesty."

Now her blue eyes—a haunting fear in their depths—searched my face.

"Oh, I am ashamed," she sobbed, "ashamed. I would save your life because you have offered so much. They told me you were a prisoner in the dungeon, and were awaiting execution, and that I—"

"Your Majesty," I said helplessly before her, "Your Majesty . . . I feel very, very happy—and very humble."

"It was little enough for me to do, for you had saved—"

"If you do not love Adolfo, it was too much for you to do."

"Marrying in Spain, Senor, are not arranged by those most interested. Our parents did this long ago. In the three years that Colonel Fuentes has spent in Venezuela vast changes have come over him, and perhaps in myself as well. I do not feel so sure of myself as I did some time ago."

Now, although I was sure this visit of the Senorita Lamartina would be my death warrant—for Adolfo would know whether she had gone—I laughed in the fullness of a great joy, for I knew that De Fuentes had lost. "Has the air of Venezuela, Your Majesty, tarnished you, in soldier, or perhaps the moonlight of New Orleans?"

"Can you jest so, Senor, when you must know they are seeking you out even now. You should never have come here; there is danger here for you."

"Assuredly; yet wherever the Senorita goes—"

"Caracas is filled with your enemies."

"Aye, and I have friends here, Senorita, the best friends that man ever had—fervent patriots who are working for the freedom of a great empire; men whom Spain will never conquer, soldiers who follow a man of destiny."

An expression of sadness touched her eyes. "Yet you told me, Senor, that you did not serve Bolivar."

"I did not serve him then. Your Majesty, but since that time I have looked upon the dead city of Tucayan, and a people who can sanction such an act of senseless brutality."

"Ah, Senor, this nightmare of murder . . . This Bolivar who has brought about all the wars, and the killings. Would you serve this—this vulture, Senor?" She caught the lapsels of my rough jacket in trembling fingers. "Senor," she said breathlessly, "my father spent his life in the service of Spain, and Polito, my brother, will doubtless do the same. One's country is one's life. Did you come to Venezuela, Senor, to offer service to Bolivar?"

"As you very well know, I followed the Senorita Lamartina to Venezuela."

"Did you journey to Caracas to serve Venezuela?"

"I saw the Senorita riding toward Caracas, and I followed her, as I would always."

"Did you visit the cathedral to-day because of your love for the fervent patriots?"

I heard the sounds of marching men, and knew that the guards had returned. This, then, was the end. "I would not hurt you, Senorita, yet I must tell you; I would tell you that my worship for you has been a sort of glory in my life, that your face has filled my dreams, that your voice has seemed—"

"Please, Senor, I cannot—"

"Under happier circumstances, Your Majesty, I could have offered very much, but with the soldiers waiting to take me to the dungeon, I can only offer gratitude to you for the joy my worship has given me."

She faced me, her eyes shining with tears. "There have been too many soldiers in my family, Senor, for me to love an enemy of Spain."

"Love is not a matter of nationality."

"No," she said sadly, "it is a madness, a wretched insanity."

She held out her hand and I pressed the fingers against my lips. "Ah, Senorita, I love you so!"

"Dios!" she gasped. "Today I tried to buy your liberty, and you didn't need it; tomorrow, when you need it, I shall try again, for you have offered so much. You will be free, then, to serve—"

"Ah, Dulce mia, may I—?"

"Adios, Senor."

As I sat through the passage of the leaden hours a darkness settled on my prison, and on my soul as well. I waited with the dull fatalism of the condemned for the coming of him who would see to my execution. Having lost the Senorita, there was nothing more that I could lose; life without her would be a futile thing, a vain effort, empty of all that which should make a life worth while.

A full moon, thrusting above the rim of the eastern hills, had just begun to spread its golden mantle over the city when Adolfo came; his guards, eight in number, stationing themselves outside my door that led into the patio. The recklessness that comes to one whose hours are numbered had laid a spell upon me.

"Well," I cried gaily as he entered, "if it isn't the stranded bridegroom!"

W. C. T. U. Holds Meeting In Honor Of Frances Willard

Members of the Redwood City Women's Christian Temperance Union honored the founder of the national union, Frances Willard, at a meeting held Wednesday in the Methodist church at which the president, Mrs. Ada Mengler, presided.

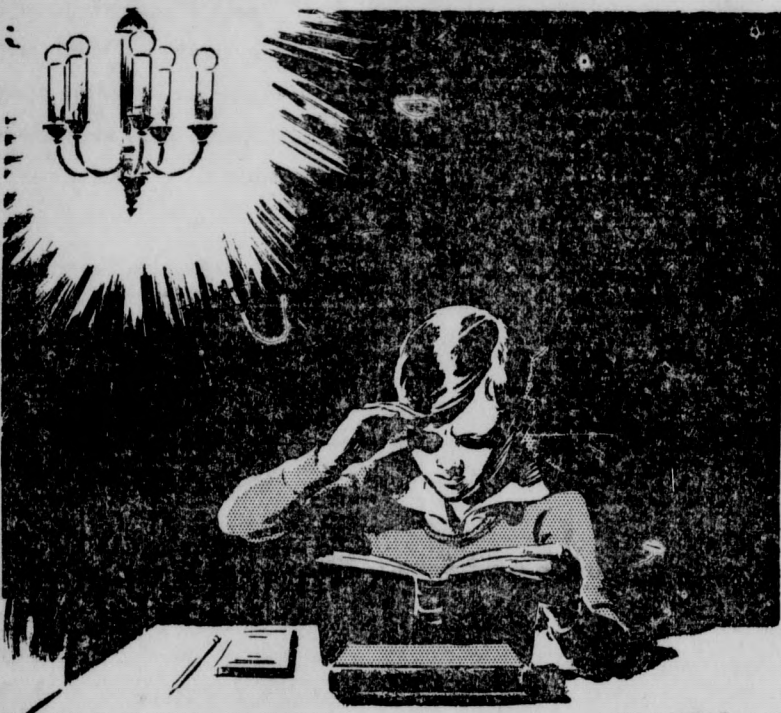

Mrs. R. E. Stephens was in charge of a program marked by a review of the life of Mrs. Willard, told by the following: Mrs. D. Fred Gatchel, her childhood; Mrs. Jane Downs, her girlhood; Mrs. Roy Gordon, early womanhood; Mrs. L. B. Hinman, leadership; Mrs. Ora Reynolds Jones, organization of women's suffrage, and a brief summary by Mrs. Mengler.

A quartet, composed of Mrs. Elizabeth Mansfield, Mrs. D. M. Salsbury, Mrs. C. R. Altman and Mrs. Clinton Gleason, sang several numbers, accompanied by Mrs. Jesse R. Rudkin.

Assisting Mrs. Stephens with the program were Mrs. Emily Vasquez and Mrs. Margaret Burgess.

A silver offering was taken for W.C.T.U. work.

It is estimated that one-third of the airplane passengers in California are women.

This light GLARES
and is bad for his eyes

Any school child knows what's wrong with this picture.

It shows an example of poor lighting—and this kind of lighting is in most homes today.

Poor lighting is a handicap in life. It causes eye-strain. It makes the studious child sleepy and he wants to go to bed early. His school work suffers.

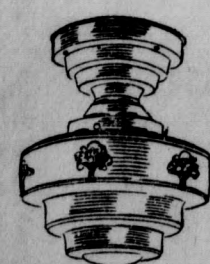

To avoid glare, shade all your lights. But also make sure that you have enough light to permit you to see clearly. You should have an abundance of shaded light in each room, especially in the kitchen. Good lighting is cheap. In the living-room it costs but 1½ cents an hour.

Proper lighting is easy to have. P. G. and E. lighting specialists will gladly advise you.

Dealers in modern lighting units also know the value of an abundance of shaded light. Investigate. You will find it worth your while.

Section of modern lighting unit that directs raw light to ceiling, diffuses it evenly over the entire room and correctly controls the light.

Diffusing bowl enclosing electric lamp prevents glare and eye-strain. Excellent method of controlling light.

TO THE MAN WHO HAS STOPPED SAVING

Perhaps that savings account you started has been asleep quite a while.

At regular intervals, we wake it up to add the interest it has earned. But it hasn't grown as you intended.

Too bad. By this time, you might have had a sum equal to six months' income—little enough in case of illness, accident or loss of work.

Undoubtedly there was a good reason why you stopped saving. But isn't it worth trying again? After all, nothing takes the place of cash in the bank.

You can make deposits in any Bank of America branch for credit to your account in any other branch... just one advantage of saving with this strong, statewide Bank.

30 YEARS AGO

Times-Gazette, Feb. 22, 1902

Now is the time to place the walk around your house in shape.
A load or two of cinders will do the trick. Mr. Cochran is the man to see—he has 50 carloads of cinders on hand.

S. H. Cronk is putting the finishing touches on his new stable near the depot.

The West Shore Salt Company
of this city has organized by election the following officers for the year: David A. Curry, president;
W. M. Barrett, vice president;
George W. Love, secretary; A.
Liguori, superintendent; Bank of San Mateo county, treasurer.

The weather permitting, Dan Geary's two hounds will be pitted against two dogs from the Pioneer stable tomorrow afternoon. The course will take place on the Schroeder tract. Several strong hairs have been secured from the Union coursing, park.

The old pavilion at Finger's Grove, where in the past years
so many tripped the light fantastic, was razed to the ground this week.
Some time ago Mrs. Finger sold it to H. Hess, who is having the lumber on his lot at the rear of the court house. Mr. Hess intends to erect a five-room cottage from the lumber secured from the pavilion.

William Bement, George Eiker-enkotter, Thomas Epperly, Percy Jamieson and Bert and Harry Lovie, had a narrow escape on the bay last Sunday near the San Francisco waterfront. The party was on board the launch Wave and on the return trip from the city the schooner Blow Boy collided with the launch, disabling it.
Eikerenkotter and Jamieson were thrown overboard and clung to the bow chains of the larger vessel.
The two men were rescued from their perilous position. After being carried some distance by the storm, the Wave was rescued by the tug Esby whose captain witnessed the occurrence. The passengers of the Wave came home by train that evening, having had enough sea life for the day.

Thomas Coates met with a painful but not serious accident last Sunday. While going up the mountain, his team took fright and ran away, throwing him to the ground, the rear wheel passing over his body. He received treatment at the Redwood Hospital for a fractured rib and a bruised back.

BEAR GULCH WATER LOAN NEGOTIATED

$1,250,000 Borrowed
For Development
Purposes

Borrowing of $1,250,000 by the Bear Gulch Water Company to pay off its debts and develop its properties in Southern San Mateo county was revealed yesterday with the filing in Redwood City of a trust indenture between the water company and the Wells
Fargo Bank and Union Trust Company of San Francisco.

The water company serves
North Fair Oaks, Atherton, Menlo
Park, Woodside and other territory in the lower peninsula area.
It is planned presently to issue
650 bonds of $1000 value, to draw
6 per cent interest. The company will pay off an outstanding original indebtedness of $250,000, will pay off other debts, and will draw upon the additional funds to finance improvements to the San Mateo county holdings.

The agreement, which was filed with County Recorder T. C. Rice in Redwood City, was approved by Guy C. Earl, president, and Robert M. Underhill, secretary, for the water company, and F. J. Brick-wedel, vice-president, and Grover Grady, assistant trust officer, for the bank.

Enrico Caruso's memorial candle, 16 feet high, 5 feet in circumference, and weighing one ton, will be burnt one day each year—
All Saints' Day—and will last for 18 centuries, it is said.

EX-GRID STAR TO RE-MARRY GIRL IN DIVORCE TANGLE

Wallace L. Estes, 26, oil salesman, and a former Olympic Club football star, has on file in Redwood City a notice of intention to marry the girl who the law says is not his wife because he failed to divorce the first Mrs.
Estes.

The bride-to-be, Allene Cooper,
22, a Norfolk, Va., stenographer, signed the marriage intention application back in Virginia on February 9, and will fly out here when Estes secures the license from County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman. This license made possible under a special provision of the five-day "wait" law.

Estes was prosecuted for failing to divorce Mary Stuart Estes, daughter of a former governor of Virginia. He is under five years' probation. The second Mrs. Estes had the marriage annulled to pave the way for her remarriage when the legal tangle was straightened out.

SOUGHT IN COURT

Dismissal of the suit of Henry Blecher against the county of San Mateo by which he sought to have eliminated a charge of $3,767 for purchase of rights of way in the Colma sewer project, was asked Tuesday in a petition filed by At-

The sewer project contract price was $106,214. Included was an item of $25,064 for incidentals, within which was included the $3,767 charge for rights of way for the pipe line. Blecher obtained an in-

Honey Stolen By Boys Confiscated

SAN MATEO, Feb. 16.—Four quarts of honey found in the possession of three San Francisco boys, 12 to 15 years of age, were confiscated Monday by San Mateo police when the boys admitted having taken it from a fruit stand on the highway between Redwood City and Palo Alto.

The boys were released into the custody of their parents.

Registration Of Voters Is Half Finished

Half of San Mateo county's voters were registered by the office of County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman by February 1, a check of the rolls revealed today. The rolls contained 18,000 names, which will bring the county a registration of 36,000 this year, Hinman believes. This will be over 6,000 more voters than have been registered at any previous election, Hinman reports. Intense interest in the presidential election, and a number of city and county contests are given as the reason for the record registration.

Hinman has not been able to give a total of the party registrations, but an earlier check indicated that the Democratic ranks in this otherwise Republican county were growing.

Hinman again warned voters that the rolls will close on March 2 for the various municipal elections in San Mateo county on April 11. Old registration rolls were destroyed with the close of 1931, and every voter must re-enter his name on the lists this year, as the permanent registration rolls are being compiled.

The Montana highway commission spent nearly $10,000,000 in improvement of the state's principal road system in 1931.

50 Years Ago

Times-Gazette, Feb. 18, 1882

Next Tuesday evening will be devoted to song and dance the country over; so for the benefit of the ladies we are mentioning below some of the latest fashions in vogue. They are furnished by a reliable modiste and are simply "too sweet for anything," which may be a little extravagant, but we believe it is a proper phrase for anything in the line of ladies' wear.

Although the fashion for the short round skirt has invaded the ballroom, and is everywhere seen on full dress occasions, as dinner and evening parties, still many ladies decline to give up the graceful, clinging train, "to be made schoolgirls of," as a bright little dame recently expressed it. The new train, which finds many admirers, lies but a few inches on the floor, and the skirt is very short in front, ostensibly to show the unbrothered hose, and the little boots and sandals, now universally worn.

In cotton fabrics for spring and summer dresses polka dots prevail all the softer goods. Chintz patterns are in both light and dark colors, with borders, and without. Cereals in cobwebbed lines are especially pretty. Watteau colors combine blue with pink, or rose with gray, often displaying pretty birds, shepherdesses and the like neatly and handsomely.

To be aesthetic is to be fashionable. Corsage bouquets in natural flowers are now of lilies and roses. In artificial flowers, roses, poppies, water lilies, lilies of the valley, day lilies, daisies and sunflowers are most popular. The corsage should be worn on the left shoulder, in the belt or on the skirt.

Primary colors, and old fashioned shades are announced for spring goods in place of the faded blues and dingy greens now fashionable.

Skirts are flattening and narrowing, and long waists are to give way to short ones.

Eclatante pink is to be the fashionable shade for summer goods. Short curling hair is again in fashion for young ladies.

Commerce parties are all the rage in high society.

Mrs. Atherton of Menlo at her handsome new city residence gave a party to unmarried people exclusively on Thursday evening of last week. The house from the peculiarity of its architecture, decorations and furniture, is called the Queen Anne. The Argonaut says of the event, that "Mrs. Atherton and her daughters looked very attractive in their handsome costumes and that they received their guests in a superior way." The guests were the belles and beaux of the most elegant and aristocratic circles of San Francisco society. Miss Felton, daughter of C. N. Felton of Menlo, and many other young ladies of San Mateo county were also present.

John McBain has completely renovated his Oak Grove Villa hotel at Menlo and will make it one of the most attractive summer resorts in the state.

For the first time in many months there are now no prisoners in the county jail.

Snow-balling in Redwood City on Friday morning. Young and old engaged.

When the Redwood Fire Department was out practicing at extinguishing an imaginary conflagration the other night, a horse tied alongside the cistern was served to be visibly affected. In fact, he actually wept. His tears fell so fast that in spite of the energetic working at the brake handles by the fire ladders, the cistern was found to be overflowing. The horse was led away to the banks of the creek, and upon investigation it was discovered that he had once been worked in the San Francisco Fire Department, and that his grief was caused by his recognition of the immeasurable inferiority of the San Francisco affair, in comparison with that of Redwood.

Isaac Newton was born Christmas Day.

"Personalities" Of Trees Described

That trees have personalities, which must be recognized if the most is to be obtained from them, was the statement of W. T. Davey, a son of the late John Davey, "father of tree surgery," who spoke to the Redwood City Exchange Club Wednesday night. The speaker, who came to the Pacific Coast to carry on the work of his father, described the various processes by which trees are saved from dying, through protection of their roots from harmful conditions. He urged the creation of parks and recreational areas on the peninsula, a region enjoying, he said, the special favor of nature.

Wilbur Dossie was chairman of the meeting. Entertainers from Sequoia high school gave sample acts from their variety show, which will be given Saturday night.

Dr. Robert Monteith sang two songs.

Coaches Differ on Value Of Football Rule Changes

Conflicting opinions regarding the revision of the football rules, as made Monday by the national rules committee were voiced yesterday by Pacific coast coaches.

Glenn "Pop" Warner, Stanford coach, expressed general approval of the changes although he believes that the committee was a bit too drastic on a number of points. Warner believes that the kickoff formation restricting five men on the receiving side to their own 45-yard line, will eliminate the "wedge" and reduce chances of injury to players. Permitting the kickoff by punt, drop kick or place kick will probably shorten the length of the return, Warner believes, with the punt probably being favored for the kick-off as it will allow the offensive team to get down under the ball faster.

Warner expressed approval of the rule forbidding the use of hands on the head and neck of the offensive player. The new substitution rule which permits replacement of a player at any time and the player withdrawn allowed to return once in any subsequent period, was also favored by Warner, it allowing coaches to take out a man whose condition is a little doubtful and enabling the coach to send the player back in if his condition proves satisfactory.

The Stanford coach favored all the regulations except that calling for an automatic "dead" ball when any part of the ball carrier's body, except his hands or feet, touches the ground. He pointed out that a ball-carrier could outdistance all opposition in a dash to the goal line and still lose a touchdown should he happen to slip and fall.

While one coach was liberal in his praise of a certain rule, the same ruling would be severely criticized by other coaches. Madison St. Mary's and Ingram of California took the stand that the rules committee had made the game safer for the players without taking anything vital from it.

Those opposed believed some spectacular features had been removed and that the new rules would handicap the smaller player severely.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, and often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.
